As long as the drawing of casting or other arrangements do not state otherwise, for grades ordered based on the criterion of tensile strength - Rm (tensile strength) is measured on test ingots which are cast separately - shift sample or a sample taken from a casting section. For the grades where the main property is Brinell hardness - the value of HB is measured on the castings.
2.	Dimensional tolerances	Tolerances acc. to the casting drawing, not tolerated dimensions in the min. CT 9 class acc. to PN-ISO 8062
3.	Surface roughness	Unless agreed otherwise - Ra $\geq$ 30 μ m
4.	Machining allowance	The minimum recommended machining allowance is 2.5 mm or as specified in the approved drawing based on agreed arrangements
5.	Displacements	As long as the drawing of casting or other arrangements do not state otherwise, displacements at the mould division up to 1.0 mm and core displacements up to 0,8 mm are allowed.
6.	patternmaker's taper	Suggested casting draft angles: minimum 2° or as per agreements and the approved drawing
7.	radii	Suggested radii: minimum 2 mm or according to agreements and the approved drawing
8.	External defects	On the surface to be machined, all reflex defects maximally up to the machining allowance and convex defects up to 1.5 mm are allowed. On the surfaces not to be machined, all casting defects covered by the VD6 class According to the PN-EN 1370:2012 standard or as agreed For castings to be coated, it is allowed to repair non-machining surfaces with specialised casting putty.
9.	Internal defects	Unless otherwise agreed, all casting defects up to 20% of the wall thickness are permitted. If a greater number of defects occur in a concentrated area, they shall be considered as a single defect. It is also noted that internal defects do not reach the surface of the casting, either in the as-cast or machined condition.
10.	Grinding	In compliance with arrangements with the Customer Unless agreed otherwise, the surface to be machined is not subject to grinding. The exception is the surface being the base for machining. The remaining surfaces may have: burrs, remains at mould division, remains after feeding system and at the place of mould and core contact - up to 1.5 mm.

11.	Defects in areas produced by core	As long as the drawing of casting or other arrangements do not state otherwise, in the cavities to be machined "veins" or other defects up to 2.5 mm are allowed. In cavities not to be machined the above-mentioned defects are allowed up to 1.0 mm
